CALIFORNIA ELECTIONS DATA ARCHIVE

INTRODUCTION

The California Elections Data Archive (CEDA) is a joint project of the Center for California Studies and the Institute for Social Research, both of California State University, Sacramento and the office of the California Secretary of State. The purpose of CEDA is to provide researchers, citizens, public agencies and other interested parties with a single repository of local election data. With over 6,000 local jurisdictions in California, the task of monitoring local elections is nearly impossible for individuals. CEDA addresses this problem through the creation of a single, cost-effective and easily accessible source of local election data. CEDA includes both candidate and ballot measure results for county, city, community college, and school district elections throughout the State. CEDA thus represents the only comprehensive repository of local election results in California.

Election data are collected periodically throughout the year. This enables CEDA to incorporate results from special elections as well as all regularly scheduled elections. Election results from counties, cities, and community college and school districts are entered in the CEDA database from which three standard CEDA reports are generated. These reports include:

- County Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elected county offices; vote totals and text for county ballot measures.
- City Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elected city offices; vote totals and text for all city ballot measures.
- Community College and School District Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elective community college and school district offices; vote totals and text for all district ballot measures.

Ballot measures for all jurisdictions are coded according to type (e.g., charter amendment, bond measure, initiative, etc.) and to subject (e.g., taxes, education, public safety, governance, etc.).

THE CENTER FOR CALIFORNIA STUDIES

Located at California State University, Sacramento, the Center for California Studies is a public policy, public service and curricular support unit of the California State University. The Center's location in the state Capital and its ability to draw upon the resources of the entire State University system give it a unique capacity for making contributions to public policy development and the public life of California. Center programs cover four broad areas: administration of the nationally known Assembly, Senate, Executive, and Judicial Administration Fellowship Programs; university-state government liaison and applied policy research; civic education and community service through forums, conferences and issue dialogues; and curricular support activity in the interdisciplinary field of California Studies.

INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH

Established in 1989, the Institute for Social Research (ISR) is an interdisciplinary center serving the research needs of federal, state and local government agencies, non-profit organizations and university administration, faculty and students. ISR's services include program evaluation, needs assessment, workload studies, and surveys (by mail, telephone, personal interview and laptop computer). ISR's full-time staff offer expertise in all stages of the research process including: research and sampling design, focus groups, measurement, coding and data entry, computer assisted telephone and field interviewing, data base management, statistical analysis and report production. Faculty affiliates of the Institute offer expertise in a wide variety of disciplines, including the social sciences, health and human services, engineering and education.

CALIFORNIA SECRETARY OF STATE

The Secretary of State is, among other duties, California's chief elections officer with the responsibility of administering the provisions of the Elections Code. The Secretary must compile state election returns and issue certificates of election to winning candidates; compile the returns and certify the results of initiative and referendum elections; certify acts delayed by referendum and prepare and file a statement of vote. Recent legislation permits but does not mandate that the Secretary of State compile local election results.

1998 ELECTION DATA

In 1998, the 148th year of the California Republic, voters in local elections rendered judgment on 572 local ballot measures and 5,502 candidates for local elective office. This constitutes more electoral activity than 1997 but comparable to 1996, which saw 573 local ballot measures and 5,530 local candidates. This is a consequence of the trend in the 1980s and 1990s of local governments moving their elections to even-numbered years so as to consolidate with statewide elections.

BALLOT MEASURES

1998 was another good year for ballot measures with 344 or 60.1 percent being approved by the voters. This is consistent with the overall pass rates in 1996 (57 percent) and 1997 (60 percent). Charter Amendments and recalls were particularly successful, with pass rates of 77 percent and 74 percent respectively. Voters were not as supportive of bonds (with 58 percent passing), ordinances (58 percent) or initiatives (56 percent) and even less so with tax measures (48 percent passed).

Measures dealing with general services (80 percent pass rate), transportation (70 percent) and land use issues (70 percent) were the most likely to pass although education (63 percent) and governance (64 percent) measures exceeded the pass rate (60 percent) for all measures. Environmental and public safety issues fared poorly, with pass rates of 43 percent.

It should be noted that the total numbers of ballot measures (572) and the number of successful measures (344) does not represent an explosion in local initiatives. Only 28 of the local ballot measures in 1998 were placed on the ballot through the initiative process and that includes 19 recall measures. The bulk of ballot measures were placed on the ballot by boards of supervisors, city councils and school district boards pursuant to the constitutional and statutory demands of the State. Moreover, although recalls had a pass rate of 73.7 percent, initiatives had a pass rate of 55.5 percent, less than the overall pass rate of 60.1 percent.

County Measures. All of the state's fifty-eight counties voted on ballot measures in 1998, though the activity level ranged from one to three measures in most counties to El Dorado's 17 county measures and San Francisco's 22. Of the 121 county measures, 71 or 58.7 percent, passed. Interestingly, only one county submitted a bond measure to its voters and that (San Francisco's Measure A) failed. Seven of El Dorado County's 17 measures could be attributed to the rapid growth in the county (e.g., measures dealing with allowable densities under the general plan, placing a limit on total county population, a "Control Traffic Congestion Initiative" and several improvement districts levies). As usual, San Francisco's ballot ranged from the ordinary (a freeze on water and sewer rates, police pensions, and compensation of elected officials' government) to the unusual (creation of a Taxi Commission and cutting the supervisors' staff). Perhaps the most creative county measure was in Santa Clara County where, in a wonderful display of Silicon Valley optimism, voters approved Measure F which authorized the Board of Supervisors to adopt an "instant run-off voting system" once the necessary technology is available.

Most county measures dealt with tax issues (50 or 41.3 percent of all county measures) or were charter amendments (25 or 20.6 percent) or ordinances (32 or 26.4 percent). The most frequently addressed topics of county measures were governance issues (24 or 19.8 percent of all county measures), transportation (16 or 13.2 percent), general services (15 or 12.4 percent), public safety (14 or 11.5 percent) and land use (13 or 10.7 percent). Santa Clara County voters adopted a measure limiting county supervisors to three terms

City Measures. More than 150 California cities generated 287 municipal ballot measures of which 59.9 percent or 172 passed. Charter amendments and ordinances made up 51.6 percent of city measures, with pass rates of 76.8 and 53.2 percent, respectively. Over a third of city measures were tax issues, which had only a 48 percent pass rate. City voters faced only 9 bond measures of which 7 or 77.8 percent passed. The more popular subjects of city measures included governance issues (101 or 35.2 of the total, with a pass rate of 62.4 percent) and land use (33 or 11.5 percent with a pass rate of 72.7 percent). Although representing less than 4 percent of all city measures, the 10 measures dealing with general services enjoyed a 100 percent pass rate.

It is also interesting to note that municipal voters faced 19 measures seeking to eliminate elected positions and make the positions appointive instead. Voters characterized by public opinion polls as distrustful of politicians and elected officials nevertheless defeated 15 of those measures. On the other hand, ballot measures also included recall efforts. Seven city officials faced recall elections; three were actually recalled. Eight cities passed term limits measures; no city rejected term limits, though San Marcos defeated a measure banning consecutive terms while approving a measure limiting city council members to three terms. The most unusual city measure was Measure F in Arcata which required the City Council to hold town hall meetings on the subject, "Can we have democracy when large corporations wield so much power and wealth under the law?" Measure F passed.

School Measures. Bonds and recalls are the story of the 164 measures on school and community college district ballots. Bond measures represented 81.7 percent, or 134, of all school measures with 12 recall elections accounting for another 7.3 percent. Of the 134 bond measures, 76 passed for a pass rate of 56.7 percent. The bond sales approved by the voters ranged from $233,000 for Bella Vista Elementary School District in Tulare County to $1.5 billion for the San Diego Unified School district. Overall, California voters approved school bond measures totaling more than $4 billion in 1998. Voters in nine districts also approved parcel tax increases. Finally, 12 members of school boards were subject to recalls and 11 were actually recalled.

CANDIDATE ELECTIONS

A total of 5,502 men and women sought local elective office in California in 1998. This was only 28 fewer than the 5,530 local candidates who ran in 1996. If nothing else, the willingness of over 5,500 Californians to tempt the "slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" in offering themselves to examination and very public judgment by their fellow citizens is a rough indication of the health of the California Republic.

Incumbent office-holders at the county, city and school district levels fared well in 1998 with an overall re-election rate of 85.4 percent. This compares favorably with overall incumbent re-election rates of 75.5 percent in 1997, 78.5 percent in 1996 and 79.3 percent in 1995. Incumbent re-election rates are not the whole story and certainly do not translate into unchanging and unchangeable memberships on county boards, city councils and school district boards. The reality of local elective politics in California is that while incumbents who opt to run for re-election are frequently successful, substantial numbers of winning candidates are not incumbents. In 1998, for example, the 1,499 incumbents who were re-elected accounted for 55.3 percent of all winners while 44.7 percent or 1,210 winners, were non-incumbents. Indeed, in 1995, 1996 and 1997, re-elected incumbents accounted for less than half of all winning candidates.

County races. Of the 99 incumbent county supervisors who sought re-election in 1998, 85 were successful for a re-election rate of 85.9 percent. This is, perhaps, the most significant development in local candidate elections in 1998. Four years ago, the re-election rate for county supervisors was only 42.1 percent. This increased to 69.3 percent in 1996. Another interesting development is the emergence of elected directors of community service districts. In 1998, eleven such positions were on county ballots.

City races. City council members enjoyed a strong re-election rate of 81.6 percent with 345 of 423 council incumbents being re-elected. Incumbents, however, accounted for only 47.9 percent of all winners with non-incumbents winning a majority of council seats. This is, however, an increase over 1996 when city council incumbents represented only 41.5 percent of winning candidates and 1997 when 44.5 percent of winners were also incumbents. Other incumbent elected officials were more successful in 1998 with 91.1 percent of mayors, auditors, city attorneys, treasurers and city clerks being re-elected. Moreover, incumbents represented the winners in more than half of these elections. Seven members of city councils faced recall elections in 1998 and three were actually recalled. As in previous years, the recall was a small town phenomenon with the three successful recalls occurring in Etna and the unsuccessful efforts in Windsor and Colton.

School District Races. A total of 2,432 Californians ran for 1,218 positions on community college or school district boards. Incumbent board members enjoyed an 82.8 percent re-election rate and accounted for 52.5 percent of all winners. Thus 47.5 of board members elected in 1998 were non-incumbents. A total of 12 board members faced recall elections in 1998 with all but one being recalled. The successful recalls took place in Bella Vista Elementary (Shasta County), Dehesa Elementary (San Diego County), Grossmont (San Diego County) and Sausalito Elementary (Marin County). The failed recall occurred in Alpaugh Unified in Tulare County.

TRENDS

BALLOT MEASURES

CEDA began with the November elections in 1994. In addition to this incomplete gubernatorial election year, the archive now contains four full years of election data, including one complete gubernatorial year (1998), one featuring statewide elections (1996) and two odd-numbered years devoted to local races, bond and tax measures. Fewer ballot measures were offered during the two odd-numbered years (252 and 343 in 1995 and 1997 respectively) than in years with statewide elections (573 and 572 in 1996 and 1998).

Although November remains the most popular month for elections, many counties held odd-numbered year elections in March and June. In 1996, almost all counties held elections in March and November, with very few in June. In 1998, half of the counties had April elections, while all held primary elections in June and the gubernatorial and statewide elections in November.

Bonds were more common in the odd-numbered years, making up over a third of all measures in 1995 and 1997, but 11 percent and 26 percent in 1996 and 1998. Conversely, ordinances and charter amendments were more common in even-numbered years. Ordinances made up a third and a fifth of all measures in 1996 and 1998 respectively; only one appeared on the ballot in 1997. Charter amendments constituted roughly a fifth of all measures in three of the four years. Tax issues constituted an increasing percentage of ballot measures, making up 10 percent in 1995, but 25 - 29 percent in 1996 through 1998.

Overall pass rates for ballot measures were remarkably similar in the four years, varying between 57% in 1996 and 60 – 61% in the other three years. Pass rates were highest for charter amendments, ranging between 73 and 93% over the four years. Recalls were also likely winners, with pass rates in the 69 – 74% range for the three years with a reasonable number of cases. Ordinances and bonds were more likely to win than lose, with pass rates between 58 and 61% in three of the four years. In contrast, tax measures were more apt to be defeated, with pass rates between 35 and 48% in 1995, 1996 and 1998.

Education and governance were by far the most common topics of ballot measures, constituting over half (56%) of all measures during the four years. Land use and general services issues together made up 15% of all measures, public safety and public facilities another 12%. Water, transportation, the environment and miscellaneous issues were the least common subjects of ballot measures. Although measures dealing with education were numerous in three of the four years, governance, land use, public safety and public facilities measures were concentrated in the even-numbered years.

Pass rates were highest for governance measures, varying between 84% in 1995 to 65 – 67% in the last three years. Land use measures had slightly lower and more variable pass rates, ranging from 56% to 70%. Education and general services issues maintained healthy pass rates in all four years, varying between 53 and 67% for education and 51 – 77% for general services measures. Public safety and public facilities measures had marginal pass rates, the former varying between 42% and 51% and the latter between 37% and 59%.

County Measures. County measures were concentrated in the even-numbered years, where they make up 20% of all ballot measures. Only 7% of ballot measures deal with county issues in odd-numbered year elections. Most county measures are either charter amendments, ordinances or tax-related. The first two are more apt to pass, the last more apt to fail. In 1995 and 1996, governance issues dominated, making up 39 – 41% of all county measures. In 1997, governance issues and public facilities accounted for a similar percentage (21% each) of all county measures. The gubernatorial election brought out a much greater diversity of issues. While governance measures accounted for 20% of all county measures, transportation, general services, public safety, land use, and public facilities each made up another 10 – 13%.

City Measures. Although city measures are much more common than those proposed by counties and school districts, they are not as concentrated in the even-numbered years as county measures are. They made up almost two-thirds of all measures in 1996, but only 50% in 1998 which was similar to their proportion in 1995 (47%). Most city measures are charter amendments, taxes or ordinances. Like the county measures, city charter amendments and ordinances tended to pass while tax measures tended to fail in all four years. In each of the four years, governance issues dominated city measures as well. General services' issues were more frequent in 1996 and 1997, while land use issues were common in 1996 and 1998. Public safety and public facilities were other frequent topics for city ballot measures.

School District Measures. While school district and city measures make up comparable proportions of all ballot measures in the odd-numbered years (between 42 and 51%), school district measures occur with a similar frequency to county measures during the even-numbered ones (between 15 and 29% of all measures). Changing from a marginal pass rate (51%) in 1995 to pass rates equaling the average for all measures (61 – 62%) in 1996 – 1998 may have contributed to a doubling of the number of school district measures during the past three years (from 87 in 1996 to 174 and 164 in 1997 and 1998). The success of school bonds and taxes during the same three years may also have encouraged their addition to the ballot. Pass rates for school bonds varied between 57% and 66% during the past three years, while 63 – 100% of the less numerous tax measures were approved. Recalls, generally less frequent than tax measures, usually received a high rate of approval (88 – 92% in three of the four years, although none of the 4 in 1996 were approved). Gann limit measures suddenly flourished in 1997, when there were 18 dealing specifically with schools (out of a total of 29 on the state's ballots that year); there were only two education-related Gann measures in each of the other 3 years (1995, 1996 and 1998). Collectively, half of them passed.

CANDIDATE ELECTIONS

Elections for county offices are almost entirely held during the even-numbered years. While city and school board offices are more common in those years, roughly 40% of candidates for these offices run during the odd-numbered years. The proportion of candidates who were incumbents rose slightly from 26 – 27% in 1995 and 1996 to 30 – 32% in 1997 and 1998. This apparent rebound in the number of incumbent candidates may signal an end to the post-term limit adjustment period when many city council members and county supervisors moved to fill the spots being vacated in Sacramento. Incumbent candidates were heavily favored in all four years, but particularly so in the gubernatorial election year (1998) when 82% or more won re-election.
