CALIFORNIA ELECTIONS DATA ARCHIVE

INTRODUCTION

The California Elections Data Archive (CEDA) is a joint project of the Center for California Studies and the Institute for Social Research, both of California State University, Sacramento and the office of the California Secretary of State. The purpose of CEDA is to provide researchers, citizens, public agencies and other interested parties with a single repository of local election data. With over 6,000 local jurisdictions in California, the task of monitoring local elections is nearly impossible for individuals. CEDA addresses this problem through the creation of a single, cost-effective and easily accessible source of local election data. CEDA includes both candidate and ballot measure results for county, city, community college, and school district elections throughout the State. CEDA thus represents the only comprehensive repository of local election results in California.

Election data are collected periodically throughout the year. This enables CEDA to incorporate results from special elections as well as all regularly scheduled elections. Election results from counties, cities, and community college and school districts are entered in the CEDA database from which three standard CEDA reports are generated. These reports include:

- County Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elected county offices; vote totals and text for county ballot measures.
- City Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elected city offices; vote totals and text for all city ballot measures.
- Community College and School District Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elective community college and school district offices; vote totals and text for all district ballot measures.

Ballot measures for all jurisdictions are coded according to type (e.g., charter amendment, bond measure, initiative, etc.) and to subject (e.g., taxes, education, public safety, governance, etc.).

THE CENTER FOR CALIFORNIA STUDIES

Located at California State University, Sacramento, the Center for California Studies is a public policy, public service and curricular support unit of the California State University. The Center's location in the state Capital and its ability to draw upon the resources of the entire State University system give it a unique capacity for making contributions to public policy development and the public life of California. Center programs cover four broad areas: administration of the nationally known Assembly, Senate, Executive, and Judicial Administration Fellowship Programs; university-state government liaison and applied policy research; civic education and community service through forums, conferences and issue dialogues; and curricular support activity in the interdisciplinary field of California Studies.

INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH

Established in 1989, the Institute for Social Research (ISR) is an interdisciplinary center serving the research needs of federal, state and local government agencies, non-profit organizations and university administration, faculty and students. These services include research and sampling design, measurement, coding and data entry, computer assisted telephone and field interviewing, mailed surveys, focus groups, data base management, statistical analysis and report production. ISR has completed numerous contracts with over 40 state and community agencies, several private firms and many administrative units of the university. Faculty affiliates of the Institute offer expertise in a wide variety of disciplines, including the social sciences, health and human services, engineering and education.

CALIFORNIA SECRETARY OF STATE

The Secretary of State is, among other duties, California's chief elections officer with the responsibility of administering the provisions of the Elections Code. The Secretary must compile state election returns and issue certificates of election to winning candidates; compile the returns and certify the results of initiative and referendum elections; certify acts delayed by referendum and prepare and file a statement of vote. Recent legislation permits but does not mandate that the Secretary of State compile local election results.

1999 ELECTION DATA

The year 1999 was the sesquicentennial year of state elections in California. In 1849, General Bennett Riley, the military commander of American forces in California and, with the cession of California from Mexico to the United States, the acting governor, called a convention to draft a constitution for the state of California. That convention, whose forty-eight delegates included Mariano Vallejo and seven other Californios, produced a document that was approved by the voters in November 1849. The election to ratify the new constitution was also the election to elect a Governor, 36 members of the Assembly and 16 of the Senate as well as other constitutional officers.

No such elections for state officers were held in 1999, but the California Republic again demonstrated its vitality by choosing among 2,293 candidates to elect 1,039 county supervisors, city council members, school board trustees and other local government officials. Although the initiative did not become part of the state constitution until 1910, the spirit was there in the judgment of General Riley and the Monterey Convention that the voters should decide, directly and at the polls, whether the new constitution would be ratified. That spirit of direct democracy was alive and well in 1999 with California voters passing judgement on 283 ballot measures.

BALLOT MEASURES

The 283 measures on California ballots in 1999 included 33 county ballot measures, 119 city measures and 131 school district measures. The total number of ballot measures was less than half the number voted on in 1998, which is not surprisingly given that 1999 was an "off" year with no state or federal elections and the long trend of local jurisdictions consolidating their elections with state elections in even-numbered years. Moreover, of the 282 measures in 1999, only about ten percent were placed on the ballot by action of the people (i.e., through the initiative, referendum or recall). The bulk of the measures were on the ballot by action of a county board, city council or school board.

More than half of 1999's local ballot measures were bonds (108 or 38.1 percent) or tax measures (54 or 19.0 percent). Bond measures were generally successful with a 59.2 percent approval rate. The 64 bonds which passed equaled over $2 billion ($2,180,673,000). Another $1,842,448,000 in bonds were defeated. Tax measures were only slightly less successful with 31 such measures passing (59.2 percent) and 23 being rejected by the voters (42.6 percent).

Education was the most popular subject of ballot measures with 119 or 42.0 percent of all local ballot measures falling in this category. The 29 land use measures represented 10.2 percent of all measures and one of the less successful records with only 41.3 percent passing and 58.6 percent failing.

County Measures. 1999 saw a comparatively small total of 33 county ballot measures. There were no elections of any type in 13 counties and of the 45 that did have elections at some level, only 12 had county ballot measures. Bay Area counties accounted for nearly half (16 or 48.4 percent) of all county measures (i.e. Marin, Napa and the city and county of San Francisco (which CEDA treats as a county). The success rate of all county measures was significant with two-thirds gaining voter approval (the Bay Area approval rate was 87.5 percent).

Only one county bond was offered in 1999 and that was passed ($299 million in San Francisco for replacement of Laguna Honda Hospital). Far more common were tax measures (16 or 48.4 percent or which exactly half passed and half failed); ordinances (8 or 24.2 percent with 5 passing); and charter amendments (4 or 12.1 percent; all in San Francisco and all successful). The tax measures typically asked for increases of special taxes in improvement zones (e.g., Measure J-99 in San Luis Obispo County, which raised taxes for road improvements in the Harvey Street Road Improvement Zone) or for taxes supporting paramedic and fire services. Voters in Imperial County reject a county sales tax increase.

Among the most interesting county measures were Proposition F in San Francisco which passed, prohibited ATM fees; Proposition S in Trinity County which passed advising the Board of Supervisors that new sales tax revenues should be allocated to crime and fire prevention; and Measure K in San Francisco, which passed, setting voluntary campaign spending limits on candidates for the Board of Supervisors.

City Measures. Voters in 66 California cities passed judgment on 119 separate ballot measures. Of these, 63 or 52.9 percent were approved and 56 or 47.0 percent failed. Thus municipal measures fared considerably poorer than county measures. City bond measures enjoyed marked success with 3 of 4 being adopted, including Measure C, a $8 million bond for the construction of a new police station, Arcadia in Los Angeles County. The only failed city bond was a $36.7 million bond for construction of new police facility in Santa Barbara. In contrast, the 27 municipal measures dealing with taxes, 14 or 51.8 percent passed while 13 or 48.1 percent failed.

Less than ten percent of all city measures were placed on the ballot through the initiative process (10 or 8.4 percent of the total). Moreover, the measures were less successful with only 4 being approved by the voters, for a 40 percent pass rate.

The two most common subjects for city measures were governance issues (45 or 37.8 percent of all city measures) and land use issues (29 or 24.3 percent). Governance issues ranged from cutting the salaries of the mayor and city council members in Inglewood (passed) to a $400 a month pay raise for the mayor of Modesto (failed) to term limits on the Council members in Apple Valley (failed) to three measures in Redondo Beach seeking to change elective offices into appointed ones (all failed). Governance issues also included eight recall elections, all of which were successful (three Council members in Apple Valley; two in Montague, two in San Jacinto and one in Weed).

Land use issues involved numerous efforts to make rezoning and growth decisions subject to voter approval. Ten measures directly addressing growth issues, of which 6 passed and 4 were defeated. Of particular interest were 5 measures (3 passed, 2 failed) which sought to make various land use decisions subject to voter approval. For example, with the passage of Measure U in Chino Hills, any increase in the number of housing units permitted under the city's general plan and any conversion of non-residential zoning to residential now requires voter approval. Under Measure A in Napa, any change to the city's rural urban limit line now must be approved by the voters or a fourth-fifths vote of the city council. In Agoura Hills, with the passage of Measure B, any change to land currently designated as open space now requires a two-thirds vote of the voters. On the other hand, Measure F in San Ramon, which would have made various land use decisions subject to voter approval, failed as did Measure D in Pleasanton which would have required voter approval for any project involving ten or more residential units.

School Measures. In 1999, as in previous years, school district measures mean bond measures. School district voters faced a total of 131 ballot measures of which 103 or 78.6 percent were bond measures. Of those bond measures, 60 were approved and 43 rejected by the voters for a pass rate of 58.2 percent. Thus voters approved more than $1.8 billion dollars in school bonds. Successful bonds ranged from $248 million in the Foothill-De Anza Community College District in the heart of the Silicon Valley to $700,000 in Merced River Union Elementary School District in Merced County. The largest bond measure that failed was a $150 million effort by Livermore Valley joint Unified School District in Contra Costa County.

School district measures also included six recall efforts, four of which were unsuccessful (all in Farmersville Unified in Tulare County) and two successful (one in Willows Unified in Glenn County and Chualar Union Elementary in Monterey County). All recall efforts were in comparatively smaller school districts.

Other governance issues, which accounted for 9.1 percent of all school ballot measures, included annexation, consolidation, creation and/or unification measures (6 measures of which four were approved); increasing the size of district boards (2 measures, both passed) and providing that board members be elected from trustee areas (4, both passed)

CANDIDATE ELECTIONS

A total of 2,293 Californians presented themselves to the judgment of their fellow citizens by running for one of the 1,039 elective county, city or school district positions. Of the 1,039 elected to office, 511 were non-incumbents and 528 were incumbent office-holders successful in their efforts to be reelected. Thus, of all the people elected to local government positions in 1999, 52.8 percent were incumbents and 49.2 percent were non-incumbents. Thus incumbents seeking reelection were quite successful with a 76.7 percent reelection rate (528 of 688). The difference between a 76.7 percent reelection rate and the 52.8 percent of successful candidates who were incumbents is a function of both the 160 incumbents who were defeated and the number of incumbents who chose not to or were prohibited from running again.

County races. Elections for county offices are held in even-numbered years, with the exception of the city-county of San Francisco. Thus there was little electoral activity at the county level and of that, the most interesting was the continued emergence of county-based Community Service Districts (CSD) and the election of CSD Directors.

In 1999, 109 candidates vied for 61 CSD director positions. Of the 109, 42 or 38.5 percent were incumbents. Of the incumbents running for reelection, 32 won giving incumbents a 76.2 percent reelection rate. Overall, however, of the 61 winners, the 32 incumbents represent only 52.5 percent.

City races. California voters faced in 1999 the task of electing 244 city council members, 22 mayors, 18 city clerks, 18 city treasurers and 2 city attorneys. A total of 738 candidates vied for these 304 positions. Overall, incumbents did well with a reelection rate of 80.6 percent (186 incumbents ran for reelection, 150 won and 36 lost). However, of the 304 positions filled at the ballot, only 49.3 percent were incumbents while 154 or 50.7 percent were non-incumbents.

Incumbent city treasurers and city attorneys were especially successful with 100 percent reelection rates. Incumbent city clerks fared somewhat less well with 14 of 15 being reelected (93.3 percent). Mayoral incumbents had a reelection rate of 63.2 with 12 of 19 incumbent returned to office by the voters. Incumbent members of city councils enjoyed a reelection rate of 79.6 percent with 109 out of 137 incumbents being successful in their bids for reelection. Non-incumbents were most successful in city councils races with 55.3 percent of council winners being new to office.

School District Races. School district offices equaled 64.2 percent of all local elected positions so it is not surprising that 61.7 percent of all local government candidates in 1999 ran for school board. The 1,417 candidates running for 668 school positions included 455 incumbent school board members seeking reelection. Of these 341 or 74.9 percent were successful. This reelection rate is below both the overall incumbent reelection rate of 76.7 percent and the reelection rate of 80.6 for city incumbents candidates. Once again, however, it is important to note that incumbent reelection rates do not automatically equate to incumbent domination of school boards as of the 688 candidates elected only 341 or 51.0 percent were incumbent trustees.

TRENDS

With five full years of reporting beginning in 1995, the reduced numbers of ballot measures and candidates in odd-numbered years begins to look like a dependable trend. There are roughly half as many measures and candidates in 1995, 97 and 99 as there are in 1996 and 1998 -- between 252 and 343 ballot measures in the former, 572 and 573 in the latter; and between 2293 and 2498 candidates in the odd-numbered years compared with 5530 and 5502 in the even-numbered years. Overall pass rates for the ballot measures remain steady at 59% in 1999, varying between 57 and 61% for the five-year period. The proportion of incumbents in 1999 (30%) was consistent with the figures for 1997 and 1998 (30 and 32% respectively), showing a marked increase over 1995 and 1996 (27 and 26% respectively).

BALLOT MEASURES

The proportion of bonds among ballot measures has remained relatively constant in the three odd-numbered years, varying between 36 and 38%, declining noticeably during the even-numbered years (to 11% and 26% in 1996 and 1998). Pass rates for bonds, however, have remained extremely consistent for the past four years, at 58 to 59%. Tax measures were more common during 1996 through 1998, making up 25 to 29% of the ballot measures during those years. They were only 10% of all measures in 1995 and dropped to 19% of all measures in 1999, with pass rates noticeably higher in the past three years (48 to 57% compared with 35 to 40% in 1995 and 1996). Ordinances and charter amendments are other frequently occurring types of measures, their proportions varying widely from year to year with no apparent pattern. In 1997, there was only 1 ordinance on the ballot, while there were 176 in the preceding year and 68 in 1999. Tax measures made up a fifth of the ballot measures in 1995 and 1996, but only 9 and 7% in 1997 and 1999. Pass rates for both have been pretty constant, with ordinances passing 57 – 61% of the time and charter amendments, with the exception of 1999, passing at least three-fourths of the time.

Education continues to dominate as the topic of ballot measures, particularly in odd-numbered years. Governance issues over-shadowed education in 1996 (210 measures to 94) and came closer to parity in 1998 (125 to 164 for education) than the more typical two to one ratio, or better, in the other three years. Pass ratios for Education measures have stabilized in the 59 – 67% range for the past four years, with governance issues in a similar range for the same time period (63 – 67%).

Though much less frequent, land use issues have ranked third as a topic of ballot measures for each of the five years. They are more common in years with statewide elections and, until 1999, have enjoyed healthy pass rates, varying between 56 and 70%. This year, only 41% of the 29 land use measures passed. Like land use, public safety issues are also more common in years with statewide elections. There were 39 and 37 in 1996 and 1998, but only 12 in 1995 and 1997 and 14 in 1999. Pass rates for public safety measures are generally lower than for education, governance and land use.

School districts and cities account for most of the ballot measures each year. School district measures account for roughly half (46 to 51%) of the ballot measures in the odd-numbered years, while city measures account for half or more during the even-numbered years (50 to 65%). County measures make up 20% or less of all ballot measures, with more in the years with statewide elections (1996 and 1998) and as few as 7% in the odd-numbered years (7% in 1995 and 1997). As odd-numbered years go, 1999's 17% was uncharacteristically high. A total of 33 measures appeared on 1999 county ballots. The increase can be explained by the increase in community service districts (CSDs). CSDs are typically created to provide services to a particular area within a county and thus allow parcel tax, bonds and other such measures to be voted upon only by the people directed affected, as opposed to the entire county. A third of the 1999 county measures were CSD measures (e.g., Measure G in Marin, Measure G in Riverside and all five measures in San Luis Obispo County). Without those CSD measures, the number of county would have been a normal 7.7% of the total number of measures in 1999.

County measures. Consistent with the other odd-numbered years, there were few charter amendments in 1999 (4). The fact that all passed is consistent with generally high pass rates for this type of measure. Tax measures and ordinances are the most common types of county ballot measures. They occur in larger numbers in the years with statewide elections, but there were an unusual number of both in 1999 for an odd-numbered election year (16 and 8 respectively, when there are typically a half dozen or less). Pass rates for the ordinances were typical – 63% vs. 54 and 72 in 1996 and 1998 – while they were a little high for the tax measures (50% vs. 29 and 38% in 1996 and 1998, when there were a sufficient number to percentage). The 50% cannot be seen as unusual since there were only 16 tax measures in 1999.

City measures. Most city measures are ordinances (40%), tax issues (23%) or charter amendments (13%). Cities, like counties, offer more of these types of measures in the even-numbered years. Pass rates for charter amendments were very high in four of the five years (between 75 and 94%), but uncharacteristically low (38%) in 1999. This may be an artifact of the unusually small number of charter amendments (16) in 1999. Pass rates for ordinances and tax measures have been consistently lower (in the 40 – 50% range). Governance issues dominated in all five years with land use or general services a distant second.

School district measures. While cities and counties crowd the ballot with their measures during the even-numbered years when statewide elections are held, school districts account for roughly half of all ballot measures in the odd-numbered ones. Bonds are by far the most common with tax issues a distant second and ordinances and recalls third. Pass rates on bonds have held steady the past three years at 57 – 59% while taxes have enjoyed healthy pass rates for the past four, varying between 63 and 100%. Ordinances and recalls have generally high pass rates, but the numbers are small and therefore unreliable.

CANDIDATE ELECTIONS

While county elective offices are largely determined in the even-numbered years – with 93% of all candidates on the ballot in 1996 and 1998 -- not quite two-thirds of all candidates for city offices (64%) run during those years and only half (51%) of those running for school boards. The proportion of incumbents running is consistently highest for school boards (between 28 and 33%), somewhat lower for city offices (18 – 26%) and lowest for county office holders (0 – 27%). The proportion of incumbents running for school boards has been higher the past three years (32 – 33%) and for city offices, the last four (23 – 26%). Very few or no incumbents run for county offices during the odd-numbered years when few candidate elections are held.
