CALIFORNIA ELECTIONS DATA ARCHIVE

INTRODUCTION

The California Elections Data Archive (CEDA) is a joint project of the Center for California Studies and the Institute for Social Research, both of California State University, Sacramento and the office of the California Secretary of State. The purpose of CEDA is to provide researchers, citizens, public agencies and other interested parties with a single repository of local election data. With over 6,000 local jurisdictions in California, the task of monitoring local elections is nearly impossible for individuals. CEDA addresses this problem through the creation of a single, cost-effective and easily accessible source of local election data. CEDA includes both candidate and ballot measure results for county, city, community college, and school district elections throughout the State. CEDA thus represents the only comprehensive repository of local election results in California.

Election data are collected periodically throughout the year. This enables CEDA to incorporate results from special elections as well as all regularly scheduled elections. Election results from counties, cities, and community college and school districts are entered in the CEDA database from which three standard CEDA reports are generated. These reports include:

- County Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elected county offices; vote totals and text for county ballot measures.
- City Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elected city offices; vote totals and text for all city ballot measures.
- Community College and School District Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elective community college and school district offices; vote totals and text for all district ballot measures.

Ballot measures for all jurisdictions are coded according to type (e.g., charter amendment, bond measure, initiative, etc.) and to subject (e.g., taxes, education, public safety, governance, etc.).

THE CENTER FOR CALIFORNIA STUDIES

Located at California State University, Sacramento, the Center for California Studies is a public policy, public service and curricular support unit of the California State University. The Center's location in the state Capital and its ability to draw upon the resources of the entire State University system give it a unique capacity for making contributions to public policy development and the public life of California. Center programs cover four broad areas: administration of the nationally known Assembly, Senate, Executive, and Judicial Administration Fellowship Programs; university-state government liaison and applied policy research; civic education and community service through forums, conferences and issue dialogues; and curricular support activity in the interdisciplinary field of California Studies.

INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH

Established in 1989, ISR offers program evaluation, needs assessment, time or workload studies, descriptive surveys and the compilation and analysis of existing data to federal, state and local government agencies, non-profit organizations, as well as the University and its faculty. Specific research capabilities include: research and sampling design, questionnaire construction and formatting, in-person interviewing, computer-assisted questionnaires and telephone interviewing, multi-lingual interviewing, focus groups, mailed survey administration, data entry and database management, statistical analysis, table and graph construction, report-writing and production. ISR's supplements its full-time staff with university faculty in the social sciences, health and human services, engineering and education as projects require their specialized expertise. ISR also offers undergraduate and graduate research apprenticeships, providing paraprofessional training in research skills, for pay and/or credit, to the university's students.

CALIFORNIA SECRETARY OF STATE

The Secretary of State is, among other duties, California's chief elections officer with the responsibility of administering the provisions of the Elections Code. The Secretary must compile state election returns and issue certificates of election to winning candidates; compile the returns and certify the results of initiative and referendum elections; certify acts delayed by referendum and prepare and file a statement of vote. Recent legislation permits but does not mandate that the Secretary of State compile local election results.

2001 ELECTION DATA

The year 2001 saw a total of 96 county, city and school and community college district elections. All of California's 58 counties held at least one local election. The bulk of these elections were held on the regular election dates defined by the state's Election Code: 21 of the elections were conducted on the normal March primary date, 11 conducted in the first Tuesday in June and 34 on the normal November election day. The remaining 30 were special elections scattered through the year. These 96 elections determined the passage or failure of 233 local ballot measures and the election or defeat of 2,525 candidates for local elective office. In comparison, in the last odd-numbered election year, 1999 there were 283 ballot measures and 2,293 candidates for local offices while 2000 witnessed 559 ballot measures and 5,153 candidates. (Table A, Table C)

BALLOT MEASURES

In 2001 California voters faced a total of 233 county, city and school and community college district ballot measures of which 36 were county measures, 94 city measures and 103 school district measures. More than nine out of ten of these measures were placed on the ballot by local governing boards and only 22 or 9.4 percent made it to the ballot through the initiative process. As has been the trend in recent years (see above), the most common subject of local ballot measures was education with 106 measures of 70.3 percent of the statewide total. The most common types of measures were bond measures (73 or 31.3 percent) and tax related measures (69 or 29.6 percent). (Table A, Table B)

Voters were very supportive of local ballot measures, passing 70.4 percent or 164 measures.

Voters were also friendly towards new spending and taxes. Of the 73 bond measures, 55 or 75.3 percent passed. Of the 68 tax measures, 49 or 72.0 percent passed. Thus voters approved bond and tax measures at a higher rate than all ballot measures. This was especially true with education related ballot measures. Of the 106 education measures, 62 percent were bonds of which 47 or 75.8 percent passed. Another 23 education measures were tax measures of which 16 or 69.6 percent were approved by district voters. (Table A)

As noted above (see Trends section), the total number of local ballot measures in 2001 dropped from previous odd-numbered years. To illustrate, in 1995 there were a total of 252 ballots measures, in 1997 312 and in 1999 342 measures. In 2001 there were only 233. The CEDA data do not provide an explanation for this drop. The causes, however, may include the economic uncertainty that characterized most of 2001 that might have led to decisions to delay bond and tax measures. The wave of ballot measures necessitated by Proposition 218 has also peaked. Finally, and given the high number of bond measures in recent years, both the need for bonds and the bonding capacity of various local entities may have been largely met for the time being. (Table A)

County Measures. Only 12 counties had ballot measure elections in 2001 and the total number of county ballots measures was comparatively low. However, of the 36 county measures, 27 were passed for a 75 percent success rate. County measures relating to taxation and bonds were favorably received. Ten of 13 tax measures passed (76.9 percent) as did all 3 bond measures (100 percent). On the other hand, the 12 measures relating to governance issues had decidedly mixed results with 7 passing (58.3 percent) and 5 failing (42.6 percent). (County Report, Table 1.3)

County taxpayers were willing to tax themselves but not through countywide tax measures. The proliferation of community service districts (CSD) or county service areas (CSA) continued in 2001. CSDs and CSAs are county level special districts with governing boards and authority to levy taxes. Community service districts are created to allow voters in a clearly defined geographic area to tax themselves for the purpose of providing specified services to that area. For example a CSD or CSA can be created to finance and administer park and recreation, transportation or other public services that the countywide electorate would not support but voters of the specific area would. In 2001 there were a total of 14 CSD/CSA tax measures of which 11 (78.5 percent) passed. (County Report, Table 1.3, Table 1.4)

Marin County, for example, had a total of 11 ballot measures in 2001. Nine of those measures created or increased taxes for new and existing community service districts and county service areas. Eight of the nine measures passed. These measures primarily provided funding for road, landscape, marine and beach maintenance. Plumas County had only 2 ballot measures in 2001, both community service district tax measures providing revenue for emergency medical and fire services in two separate districts within Plumas County. Both passed. It should be noted that San Francisco traditionally has more ballot measures than any other county but in 2001, its 8 measures was second to Marin. Together Marin and San Francisco were responsible for more than half of all county ballot measures. (County Report, Table 1.3, Table 1.4)

City Measures. In 2001 64 of the 94 city measures presented to the voters passed (68 percent). This success rate was lower than the 75.0 percent rate for county measures. The most common municipal measures were tax measures (32 or 34 percent) with charter amendments being the second most frequent (24 or 25.5 percent). Tax measures fared well with 23 or 71.8 percent passing. However, 10 of the 32 tax measures levied taxes not on city residents but rather on visitors through transient occupancy or entertainment tax measures. Charter amendments were also generally successful with 15 such measures being adopted (62.5 percent). Governance issues were the most frequent topic of city ballot measures with 35 measures or 37.2 percent of all city measures falling into this category. Revenue measures accounting for 27 or 28.7 percent of the total number of city measures. Both types, but especially revenue measures, enjoyed high success rates, (69 percent and 89 percent respectively). City voters approved 5 out of 8 bond measures (62.5 percent) acquiring $69,125,000 new municipal indebtedness. (City Report, Table 1.3)

School Measures. As in previous odd-numbered years, school and community college districts measures represented the largest number of ballot measures in 2001. The 103 school measures had a high success rate with 73 measures (70.8 percent) being approved by the voters. Of these measures, the majority, 62, were bond measures (60.1 percent), of which 47 (75.8 percent) passed, creating more than three billion dollars in school bond indebtedness. Of the remaining 41 ballot measures, 23 were tax measures of which 16 or 69.6 percent passed, and 14 recalls, nine of which passed. The remaining 4 measures dealt with ordinances. (School District Report, Table 1.3)

CANDIDATE ELECTIONS

In 2001, 2,525 Californians presented themselves to the voters as candidates for 1,175 county, city and school and community college district elected positions. This total of 2,525 candidates is the highest for an odd-numbered year since the inception of CEDA in 1994. The low was 2,293 in 1999. This increase is likely attributable to the increase in both the number of and the visibility of community service districts and community service areas. Both CSDs and CSAs have elective boards of directors. In 1997, there were 21 candidates for such positions; in 1999 there were 138 and 186 in 2001. (Table C)

Overall, incumbents continued to fare well among voters. Of the 755 incumbent candidates that sought reelection, 584 or 77.4 percent succeeded while only 171 or 22.6 percent lost. However, the candidates who won election to local office continue to be split roughly 50/50 between returning incumbents and new faces. In 2001, incumbents filled 49.7 percent of the 1175 available local elected positions available while 50.3 of the positions went to non-incumbents. This remains an important finding. Incumbent reelection rates alone can create the impression of static local governing boards with no turnover. CEDA data provides a clear and more detailed picture of governing boards with steady and significant turnover and local electorates that are positively inclined to reelect incumbents. (Table C)

County races. In 2001 county races were predominantly elections for directors of community service districts. There were 186 candidates for 94 CSD director positions. Of the 186 candidates 38 incumbents won and 14 lost while 56 non-incumbent candidates won and 78 lost. There were only 2 other county elections in California in 2001. One was for a county treasurer. The incumbent was the only candidate. The other election was for a county district attorney. There were two candidates and the incumbent won. (Table C, County Report, Table 2.2)

City races. Incumbents also fared well in city races. In 2001, 702 candidates ran for 268 posts in city government. Most ran for the 224 city council seats up in 2001. Indeed, the 663 city council candidates represented 94.4 percent of all city candidates. (Table C)

Voters continued to favor incumbent council members seeking reelection. Of the 144

incumbents running, 114 or 79.2 percent won and only 30 or 20.8 percent lost. Of the 459 non-incumbent candidates, 110 or 24 percent won while 349 or 76 percent lost. Non-incumbents were elected to 110 or 49.1 percent of all seats up last year while incumbents filled 114 or 50.9 percent. Again, the data underscores that high incumbent reelection rates do not necessarily mean an absence of healthy turnover among local elected officials. There were 44 other city posts open in 2001 that drew 99 candidates. Of these candidates, 33 were incumbents of who 30 won reelection for a 90.9 incumbent reelection rate. Consequently, of the 44 available city offices, 30 or 68.2 percent were taken by incumbents while non-incumbents were elected to 14 or 31.8 percent of the positions. (Table C)

School District Races. In 2001 there were 1,634 candidates for 811 seats on school boards. Of these, 525 were incumbents and 1,109 were non-incumbents. As usual, incumbents were more successful with a success rate of 76.4 percent as compared to the non-incumbent success rate of only 37 percent. However, once again high incumbent reelection rates did not prevent a healthy turnover rate with the 811 trustee positions being filled by 401 incumbents and 410 non-incumbents (49.4 percent and 50.5 percent respectively). (Table C)

TRENDS

The 2001 elections had the fewest ballot measures of the seven election years tracked by CEDA. Although odd-numbered years typically have roughly half as many ballot measures as even-numbered ones, 2001 had still fewer than recent history would suggest -- 233 compared with a range of 252 to 342 in 1995, 1997 and 1999. On the other hand, the 2001 elections offered more candidates (2525) than had previously characterized these odd-numbered years (2293 to 2498). Overall pass rates for the ballot measures reached a seven-year high of 70%, exceeding the high of 61% in 1995 by 9 percentage points. The proportion of incumbents (30%) is consistent with previous years. From 1997 through 2001, the proportion of incumbents varied between 30% and 32%. (Table A, Table C)

BALLOT MEASURES

While bonds continue to make up a higher percentage of ballot measures during the odd-numbered years (36% to 38% in 1995, 1997 and 1999 vs. 11 to 26% in the even-numbered years), there were fewer than expected during 2001 (31%). The pass rate for bonds, however, jumped from a stable range of 58% to 61% during 1996 through 2000 to 75% in 2001. Tax measures as well passed in unprecedented numbers (72% compared with previous highs of 56% and 57% in 1997 and 1999). The number of tax measures rebounded sharply from a low of 19% and 22% in 1999 and 2000 to a level (29%) that characterized 1996 through 1998 (25% to 29%). There were fewer ordinances (33) than any CEDA year except 1997, when a single ordinance was offered and passed. The pass rate of 58% was consistent with that for ordinances in the other five years, which have hardly varied from that figure. There was an above average number of recalls (21) with a very typical 71% passing, but fewer charter amendments (25) than in all but one year of the last seven. Only 20 were offered in 1999, but the number varied from 31 in 1997 to a high of 115 in 1996. The pass rate for charter amendments was also lower in the two years with fewer amendments (50% in 1999 and 60% in 2001 compared with 67% to 93% in the other five years). In 2001, a single initiative appeared on a city ballot and passed. Typically, there have been between 7 and 21 initiatives during an election year. (Table A)

Education remains the hot topic of ballot measures, particularly in odd-numbered years. In each of the four, starting in 1995, education made up between 42% and 51% of the measures. Although governance issues compete with education for voter attention in the even-numbered years, education measures outnumber governance measures by roughly two to one in the alternate years (45% to 19% in 2001). Pass rates, unusually high in 2001 for education measures (72% vs. 53% to 67% in the preceding six years), were on target for governance issues (67% in 2001 with the previous five years varying between 63% and 67%). (Table B)

Ranked third for each of the last six years, land use issues virtually disappeared from the ballot in 2001. However, the seven measures garnered a not untypical 71% pass rate. Public facilities and public safety measures (with 16 and 11 measures respectively) eclipsed land use. While pass rates for public facilities measures were closer to the seven year low (50% compared with lows of 37% and 50% in 1996 and 1995), the pass rate of 73% for public safety measures was at least 50% higher than those for comparable measures in the preceding six years, a legacy perhaps of the World Trade Center tragedy. Markedly fewer measures dealt with general services (7) and transportation (4), numbers so low that pass rates are unreliable. (Table B)

School districts and cities account for most of the ballot measures in each election year, with each averaging slightly less than half of all measures in the odd-numbered years. In 2001, school districts comprised 44% and cities, 40%, of all measures. County measures, a mere 15% of all ballot measures in 2001, make up about a fifth in the even-numbered years. The increasing number of county ballot measures in odd-numbered years, from 17 in 1995 to 36 in 2001, reflects an increase in the number of community service districts (CSDs). CSDs are typically created to provide services to a particular area within a county, allowing parcel tax, bonds and other similar measures to be voted upon only by the people directly affected rather than by the county as a whole. In 2001, 20 of 36, or 56%, of the county measures were CSD measures. Without the CSD measures, the number of county measures (16) would have been right at the usual 7%. (County Report, Table 1.3, City Report Table 1.3, School District Report, Table 1.3)

County Measures. Tax measures and ordinances account for two-thirds of all county ballot measures (36% and 31% respectively). They occur more often in even-numbered years, with three-fourths of those on the ballot in the past seven years appearing in 1996, 1998 and 2000. Although small in number, county tax measures (13) and bonds (3) in 2001 enjoyed high pass rates (77% and 100% respectively). County bonds and recalls are rare; only 20 bonds and 12 recalls appeared on the ballot over the past seven years. County initiatives occur only in even-numbered years while charter amendments are concentrated in those years as well (79% of those on the ballot between 1995 and 2001 appeared in the even-numbered years). (County Report, Table 1.3)

County measures dealt primarily with governance issues (33%), public safety (19%) and public facilities (14%). Because of the small numbers, pass rates are unreliable. (County Report, Table 1.4)

City Measures. Most city measures are taxes (34%), charter amendments (26%) or ordinances (19%). Like counties, cities offer more of these types of measures in the even-numbered years. Three-fourths of city ordinances, and two-thirds of city tax measures and charter amendments appeared on ballots in 1996, 1998 and 2000. While 2001 pass rates for ordinances and charter amendments were close to the usual range (48% to 58% for ordinances and 70% to 94% for charter amendments), the 72% pass rate for taxes was uncharacteristically high -- pass rates during the previous six years varied between 29% and 52%. While a 70% pass rate is not unusual for school district tax measures, the 72% and 77% pass rates for city and county tax measures in 2001 were much higher than expected. (City Report, Table 1.3)

City measures focused on governance issues (35%), revenue (29%) and public facilities (13%). The pass rate (73%) for governance issues was a little higher than the range for the past five years (62% to 68%). Revenue measures not targeted for specific expenditure categories were introduced as a topic area for city measures in 2000. Voter acceptance of these measures was quite robust (88%). Inspection of their content suggests why: many are occupancy and entertainment taxes which disproportionately tax visitors rather than residents. (City Report, Table 1.4)

School District Measures. While cities and counties concentrate more of their ballot measures in the even-numbered years, school districts make up approximately half of all measures during the odd-numbered years. Most of these measures are either bonds (60% in 2001) or tax measures (22%) with recalls a distant third (14%). Pass rates for bonds were unusually high in 2001 (76% compared with a range of 45% to 59% in five of the last six years); the 70% pass rate for tax measures was in the usual range (63% to 100% in five of the last six years). (School District Report, Table 1.3)

CANDIDATE ELECTIONS

Tellingly, almost all county candidates in 2001 were running for directors of CSDs (186 out of 189 candidates for county offices). This caps a dramatic increase in the number of county candidates during the odd-numbered years, beginning with 0 in 1995, growing to 21 in 1997 and 138 in 1999, and jumping to 189 in 2001. Nevertheless, most county offices are decided in even-numbered year elections (79%), while two-thirds of all candidates for city offices (68%) run in those years and roughly half (52%) of those running for school boards. The proportion of incumbents was higher among those running for director of a CSD (28%) than among those running for City Council (24%)-- a substantial difference given the large numbers involved. The short history and lower profile of CSDs may account for the higher proportion of incumbent candidates. The incumbency ratio for school board candidates is consistent with previous years-- it has varied between 30 and 33% during five of the last six years. The city council incumbency ratio is at the low end of its customary range, which has varied between 23% and 26% over the last five years. (Table C)
